1) Introduction:

what's King Coconut ?

King coconut is some kinda coconut that you can find commonly in Sri Lanka. I think many of you don't know about king coconuts, because it's not common everywhere in the world, even in India. I'm going to share some information about it.. This tree looks exactly the same as a coconut tree, but color is different. Tree leaves also not fully green, it's some kinda color mixed with green and yellow. Some people regard king coconuts as a living pharmacy. Here they are.

Usually most people drink its water just to quench their thirst, but king coconuts are a powerful herbal more than just a drink. Very tasty, much more better than the normal green coconuts. The king coconut is thought to have originated on the island of Sri Lanka where today 50 rupees will afford you this nutritious snack locally known as thambili.

The water of the king coconut is naturally sterile and therefore it is a good substitute for saline. In World War 2 both American and Japanese military doctors injected king coconut water into a patients' veins instead of sterile glucose solutions

Benefit of King Coconut Water

Sri Lanka has now started to package Natural Nuts on Hygienical condition in to corugated Boxes to export. Coconut water has a nutritive energy value of 17.4 calories per 100gm and 0.1g protein, 0.1g fat, 4g carbohydrates, 0.02mg calcium, 0.01mg phosphorous and 0.5mg iron.

Dr. D. P. Atukorale, the well known cardiologist, has stated that tender coconut water has the medical capability of being used to feed infants suffering from intestinal disturbances, oral rehydration, to keep the body cool, to apply on the body to prevent prickly heat and summer boils and also treat the rashes caused by small pox, chicken pox and measles. He says it's a good tonic for the old and the sick.

It also increases the flow of urine and can be used as a blood plasma substitute because it is sterile, pyrogen — free and does not destroy blood cells. It also contains organic compounds that have growth promoting properties. According to Dr. Atukorale ayurvedic concepts believe that "it is unctuous, sweet, increasing semen, promoting digestion and clearing the urinary path".
